

An Invitation for Me to Think: A Collection of Poems from the New York Review of Books

An Invitation for Me to Think is a collection of poems from the New York Review of Books. The poems are by some of the most acclaimed poets of our time, including W.H. Auden, John Ashbery, Elizabeth Bishop, Robert Bly, Gwendolyn Brooks, Robert Creeley, E.E. Cummings, Emily Dickinson, T.S. Eliot, Robert Frost, Allen Ginsberg, Seamus Heaney, John Hollander, A.E. Housman, Randall Jarrell, Robinson Jeffers, James Joyce, Donald Justice, Galway Kinnell, Maxine Kumin, Philip Larkin, Denise Levertov, Robert Lowell, Archibald MacLeish, Vladimir Nabokov, Pablo Neruda, Ezra Pound, Sylvia Plath, Anne Sexton, William Carlos Williams, and Richard Wilbur.

The poems in this collection are as diverse as the poets who wrote them. There are poems that are lyrical and beautiful, poems that are challenging and thought-provoking, and poems that are simply fun to read. But all of the poems in this collection share one thing in common: they are all invitations to think.
