Solie's writing is characterized by its keen observation of human nature and its ability to capture the subtleties of emotion. In "Pigeon," she weaves together personal experiences, historical events, and philosophical musings to create a resonant and thought-provoking work that speaks to the universal human condition.

Themes of Love and Loss

Love and loss are central themes that run throughout "Pigeon." Solie explores the complexities of romantic relationships, capturing the ecstasy and heartbreak that can coexist within the same experience. In the poem "Love," she writes:

“ Love is a wild bird, its feathers iridescent, its song a siren's call. It can build a nest in your heart, or it can tear it apart. ”

Solie also examines the profound impact of loss, both personal and collective. In the poem "Elegy," she mourns the passing of her father, capturing the raw and visceral emotions that accompany grief:

““

“ I remember your hands, their rough texture, the way they held mine. Now they are gone, and I am lost. ”

The Search for Meaning

Beyond the themes of love and loss, "Pigeon" also explores the larger question of human existence and the search for meaning. Solie grapples with questions of mortality, the nature of time, and the often elusive nature of happiness. In the poem "The Question," she writes:

““

“ What is the meaning of life? Is it to find love, to have children, to make a difference in the world? Or is it simply to live, to experience all that life has to offer, and to die with no regrets? ”

Through her thoughtful and insightful poems, Solie invites readers to contemplate these fundamental questions and to seek out their own answers.
